

PRINCIPLES
OF
POLITICAL ECONOMY

WITH
SOME OF THEIR APPLICATIONS TO SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY.

BY JOHN STUART MILL.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOL. II.

LONDON:
JOHN W. PARKER, WEST STRAND.
M.DCCC.XLVIII.

CONTENTS

OF

THE SECOND VOLUME.

BOOK III.

EXCHANGE.—(Continued.)

CHAPTER VII. Of Money.

	Page
§ 1. PURPOSES of a Circulating Medium	3
2. Gold and silver, why fitted for those purposes	5
3. Money a mere contrivance for facilitating exchanges, which does not affect the laws of Value	8

CHAPTER VIII. Of the Value of Money, as dependent on Demand and Supply.

§ 1. Value of Money, an ambiguous expression	11
2. The value of money depends, ceteris paribus, on its quantity	12
3. — together with the rapidity of circulation	17
4. Explanations and limitations of this principle	19

CHAPTER IX. Of the Value of Money, as dependent on Cost of Production.

§ 1. The value of money, in a state of freedom, conforms to the value of the bullion contained in it	23
2. — which is determined by the cost of production	26
3. This law, how related to the principle laid down in the preceding chapter	28

CHAPTER X. Of a Double Standard, and Subsidiary Coins.

	Page
§ 1. Objections to a double standard	32
2. The use of the two metals as money, how obtained without making both of them legal tender	34

CHAPTER XI. Of Credit, as a Substitute for Money.

§ 1. Credit not a creation but a transfer of the means of production	36
2. In what manner it assists production	37
3. Function of credit in economizing the use of money	39
4. Bills of exchange	41
5. Promissory notes	46
6. Deposits and cheques	47

CHAPTER XII. Influence of Credit on Prices.

§ 1. The influence of bank notes, bills, and cheques, on price, a part of the influence of Credit	50
2. Credit a purchasing power similar to money	51
3. Effects of great extensions and contractions of credit. Phenomena of a commercial crisis analyzed	53
4. Bills a more powerful instrument for acting on prices than book credits, and bank notes than bills	58
5. — the distinction of little practical importance	61
6. Cheques an instrument for acting on prices, equally powerful with bank notes.....	67
7. No generic distinction between bank notes and other forms of credit	69

CHAPTER XIII. Of an Inconvertible Paper Currency.

§ 1. The value of an inconvertible paper, depending on its quantity, is a matter of arbitrary regulation	72
2. If regulated by the price of bullion, an inconvertible currency might be safe, but not expedient	75
3. Examination of the doctrine that an inconvertible currency is safe if representing actual property	77
4. — of the doctrine that an increase of the currency promotes industry	81

	Page
5. Depreciation of currency a tax on the community, and a fraud on creditors	83
6. Examination of some pleas for committing this fraud	84

CHAPTER XIV. Of Excess of Supply.

§ 1. Can there be an oversupply of commodities generally?	89
2. The supply of commodities in general, cannot exceed the power of purchase	91
3. — never does exceed the inclination to consume	92
4. Origin and explanation of the notion of general oversupply	94

CHAPTER XV. Of a Measure of Value.

§ 1. A Measure of Exchange Value, in what sense possible	98
2. A Measure of Cost of Production	100

CHAPTER XVI. Of some Peculiar Cases of Value.

§ 1. Values of commodities which have a joint cost of production	104
2. Values of the different kinds of agricultural produce.....	107

CHAPTER XVII. Of International Trade.

§ 1. Cost of Production not the regulator of international values....	110
2. Interchange of commodities between distant places, determined by differences not in their absolute, but in their comparative, cost of production	112
3. The direct benefits of commerce consist in increased efficiency of the productive powers of the world	115
4. — not in a vent for exports, nor in the gains of merchants	115
5. Indirect benefits of commerce, economical and moral; still greater than the direct	118

CHAPTER XVIII. Of International Values.

§ 1. The values of imported commodities depend on the terms of international interchange	121
2. — which depend on the Equation of International Demand....	123
3. Influence of cost of carriage on international values	128

	Page
4. The law of values which holds between two countries, and two commodities, holds of any greater number	129
5. Effect of improvements in production, on international values	133
6. The cost to a country of its imports, on what circumstances dependent	138
 CHAPTER XIX. Of Money, considered as an Imported Commodity.
§ 1. Money imported in two modes; as a commodity, and as a medium of exchange.....	141
2. As a commodity, it obeys the same laws of value as other imported commodities	142
3. Its value does not depend exclusively on its cost of production at the mines	145
 CHAPTER XX. Of the Foreign Exchanges.
§ 1. Purposes for which money passes from country to country as a medium of exchange	147
2. Mode of adjusting international payments through the exchanges	147
3. Distinction between variations in the exchanges which are self-adjusting, and those which can only be rectified through prices	153
 CHAPTER XXI. Of the Distribution of the Precious Metals through the Commercial World.
§ 1. The substitution of money for barter makes no difference in exports and imports, nor in the law of international values	156
2. The preceding theorem further illustrated.....	160
3. The precious metals as money, are of the same value, and distribute themselves according to the same law, with the precious metals as a commodity.....	164
4. International payments not of a commercial character.....	166

CHAPTER XXII. Influence of Currency on the Exchanges and on Foreign Trade.

	Page
§ 1. Variations in the exchange, which originate in the currency	168
2. Effect of a sudden increase of a metallic currency, or of the sudden creation of bank notes or other substitutes for money	169
3. Effect of the increase of an inconvertible paper currency. Real and nominal exchange	174

CHAPTER XXIII. Of the Rate of Interest.

§ 1. The rate of interest depends on the demand and supply of loans	178
2. Circumstances which determine the permanent demand and supply of loans	179
3. Circumstances which determine the fluctuations.....	182
4. The rate of interest not really connected with the value of money, but often confounded with it.....	185
5. The rate of interest determines the price of land and of securities	188

CHAPTER XXIV. Of the Regulation of a Convertible Paper Currency.

§ 1. Two contrary theories respecting the influence of bank issues	190
2. Examination of each.....	193
3. Reasons for thinking that the Currency Act of 1844 produces a part of the beneficial effect intended by it	197
4. — but produces mischiefs more than equivalent	201
5. Should the issue of bank notes be confined to a single establishment?	214
6. Should the holders of notes be protected in any peculiar manner against failure of payment?.....	216

CHAPTER XXV. Of the Competition of different Countries in the same Market.

§ 1. Causes which enable one country to undersell another	219
2. Low wages one of those causes	222

	Page
3. — when peculiar to certain branches of industry	224
4. — but not when common to all	226
5. Some anomalous cases of trading communities examined.....	228

CHAPTER XXVI. Of Distribution, as affected by Exchange.

§ 1. Exchange and Money make no difference in the law of wages	231
2. — in the law of rent	234
3. — nor in the law of profits	235

BOOK IV.

INFLUENCE OF THE PROGRESS OF SOCIETY ON PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION.

CHAPTER I. General Characteristics of a Progressive State of Wealth.

§ 1. Introductory Remarks	243
2. Tendency of the progress of society towards increased command over the powers of nature; increased security; and increased capacity of co-operation	244

CHAPTER II. Influence of the Progress of Industry and Population on Values and Prices.

§ 1. Tendency to a decline of the value and cost of production of all commodities	250
2. — except the products of agriculture and mining, which have a tendency to rise	252
3. — that tendency from time to time counteracted by improvements in production	254
4. Effect of the progress of society in moderating fluctuations of value	255
5. Examination of the influence of speculators, and in particular of corn dealers	257

CHAPTER III. Influence of the Progress of Industry and Population on Rents, Profits, and Wages.

	Page
§ 1. First case; population increasing, capital stationary	262
2. Second case; capital increasing, population stationary	266
3. Third case; population and capital increasing equally, the arts of production stationary	267
4. Fourth case; the arts of production progressive, capital and population stationary	268
5. Fifth case; all the three elements progressive	275

CHAPTER IV. Of the Tendency of Profits to a Minimum.

§ 1. Doctrine of Adam Smith on the competition of capital	280
2. Doctrine of Mr. Wakefield respecting the field of employment	282
3. What determines the minimum rate of profit	284
4. In opulent countries, profits habitually near to the minimum	287
5. — prevented from reaching it by commercial revulsions.....	290
6. — by improvements in production	292
7. — by the importation of cheap necessaries and instruments....	294
8. — by the emigration of capital	296

CHAPTER V. Consequences of the Tendency of Profits to a Minimum.

§ 1. Abstraction of capital not necessarily a national loss.....	299
2. In opulent countries, the extension of machinery not detrimental but beneficial to labourers	302

CHAPTER VI. Of the Stationary State.

§ 1. Stationary state of wealth and population, dreaded and deprecated by writers	306
2. — but not in itself undesirable	308

CHAPTER VII. On the Probable Futurity of the Labouring Classes.

	Page
§ 1. The theory of dependence and protection no longer applicable to the condition of modern society	313
2. The future well-being of the labouring classes principally dependent on their own mental cultivation.....	318
3. Probable effects of improved intelligence in causing a better adjustment of population—Would be promoted by the social independence of women	321
4. Tendency of society towards the disuse of the relation of hiring and service	322
5. Examples of the association of the labourers in the profits of industrial undertakings	324
6. Probable future development of this principle.....	331

BOOK V.

OF THE INFLUENCE OF GOVERNMENT.

CHAPTER I. Of the Functions of Government in general.

§ 1. Necessary and optional functions of government distinguished	337
2. Multifarious character of the necessary functions of government	338
3. Division of the subject.....	344

CHAPTER II. Of the General Principles of Taxation.

§ 1. Four fundamental rules of taxation	346
2. Grounds of the principle of Equality of Taxation	348
3. Should the same percentage be levied on all amounts of income?	350
4. Should the same percentage be levied on perpetual and on terminable incomes?	356
5. The increase of the rent of land from natural causes a fit subject of peculiar taxation	360
6. A land tax, in some cases, not taxation, but a rent charge in favour of the public	363
7. Taxes falling on capital, not necessarily objectionable	364

CHAPTER III. Of Direct Taxes.

	Page
§ 1. Direct taxes either on income or on expenditure	367
2. Taxes on rent	367
3. — on profits	369
4. — on wages	372
5. An Income Tax.....	374
6. A House Tax	378

CHAPTER IV. Of Taxes on Commodities.

§ 1. A Tax on all Commodities would fall on profits.....	383
2. Taxes on particular commodities fall on the consumer	384
3. Peculiar effects of taxes on necessaries	386
4. — how modified by the tendency of profits to a minimum	389
5. Effects of discriminating duties	395
6. Effects produced on international exchange by duties on exports and on imports	399

CHAPTER V. Of some other Taxes.

§ 1. Taxes on contracts	408
2. Taxes on communication	412
3. Law Taxes.....	414
4. Modes of taxation for local purposes	414

CHAPTER VI. Comparison between Direct and Indirect Taxation.

§ 1. Arguments for and against direct taxation	417
2. What forms of indirect taxation most eligible	422
3. Practical rules for indirect taxation	424

CHAPTER VII. Of a National Debt.

§ 1. Is it desirable to defray extraordinary public expenses by loans?	428
2. Not desirable to redeem a national debt by a general contribution	432
3. In what cases desirable to maintain a surplus revenue for the redemption of debt	434

CHAPTER VIII. Of the Ordinary Functions of Government, considered as to their Economical Effects.

	Page
§ 1. Effects of imperfect security of person and property.....	438
2. Effects of over-taxation	440
3. Effects of imperfection in the system of the laws, and in the administration of justice	442

CHAPTER IX. The same subject continued.

§ 1. Laws of Inheritance.....	448
2. Law and Custom of Primogeniture	450
3. Entails	455
4. Law of compulsory equal division of inheritances.....	457
5. Laws of Partnership	459
6. Partnerships with limited liability. Chartered Companies	461
7. Partnerships en commandite	465
8. Laws relating to Insolvency.....	471

CHAPTER X. Of Interferences of Government grounded on Erroneous Theories.

§ 1. Doctrine of Protection to Native Industry.....	480
2. Usury Laws	489
3. Attempts to regulate the prices of commodities.....	494
4. Monopolies	496
5. Laws against Combination of Workmen	498
6. Restraints on opinion or on its publication	502

CHAPTER XI. Of the Grounds and Limits of the Laisser-faire or Non-interference Principle.

§ 1. Governmental intervention distinguished into authoritative and unauthoritative	504
2. Objections to government intervention—the compulsory character of the intervention itself, or of the levy of funds to support it	506
3. — increase of the power and influence of government	508

	Page
4. — increase of the occupations and responsibilities of government	509
5. — superior efficiency of private agency, owing to stronger interest in the work	511
6. — importance of cultivating habits of collective action in the people.....	513
7. Laisser-faire the general rule	515
8. — but liable to large exceptions. Cases in which the consumer is an incompetent judge of the commodity. Education	519
9. Case of persons exercising power over others. Protection of children and young persons; of the lower animals. Case of women not analogous	523
10. Case of contracts in perpetuity	527
11. Cases of delegated management	527
12. Cases in which public intervention may be necessary to give effect to the wishes of the persons interested. Examples: hours of labour; disposal of colonial lands.....	531
13. Case of acts done for the benefit of others than the persons concerned. Poor Laws.....	535
14. — Colonization	539
15. — Other miscellaneous examples	545
16. Government intervention may be necessary in default of private agency, in cases where private agency would be more suitable	547